

FIREMEN'S ANNUAL SHOW A BIG SUCCESS

The special feature show given under the auspices of the members of the Daly City Volunteer Fire Department at the Daly City Theatre last Wednesday evening, proved to be a decided success in every way.

Two performances were given, the theatre being filled to capacity at each performance. Those who had attended previous shows given by the local firemen knew that an evening of enjoyment was in store for them, and made it a point to be present on Wednesday evening.

And those who were fortunate enough to be present were not disappointed. A splendid program had been prepared by the energetic committee representing the firemen, and at both performances an appreciative audience was royally entertained.

Among the special numbers provided, and introduced by "Dumbell" of Country Store fame, were: Miss Earl in songs; Siston & Siston in a dancing act; the Four Rose Buds in a dancing and singing act; and Mr. Farrell in a European novelty act. The feature picture was "She's My Baby," with Mildred Harris, Kathleen Myers, Robert Agnew and Earle Williams in the leading roles.

The committee representing the local firemen, headed by Chief J. J. Kennedy and Assistant Chiefs F. Hansen and J. Chesney, wish to thank their many friends who in any way helped to make their annual picture and vaudeville show such a decided success.

DALY CITY NOW HAS ANOTHER BALL TEAM

Another baseball team has been organized in Daly City, under the name of the Jefferson All Stars.

The team has so far participated in three contests, and have decisively defeated their opponents by immense scores. The team is composed of high school graduates, with a few exceptions, and they are just beginning to co-operate and work in unison. Chick Peboola and Richard Perada have taken care of the battery assignment exceedingly well. As the season progresses the team will probably round into a very formidable one, a team that opponents will respect.

The members of the team are: R. Perada, catcher; Chick Peboola, pitcher; E. Devencenzi, first base; "Mo" Plansky, second base; C. Aiello, shortstop; L. Kennedy, third base; C. Linhares, left field; A. Drucker, center field; L. Lagomarsino, right field; Vic Barskey, manager and utility infielder.

The baseball enthusiasts of Daly City should turn out and support their home teams, as they now have two strong teams to represent this community.

WOMAN KILLED WHEN AUTO STRIKES POLE

Returning to their homes in San Francisco after visiting with friends in Daly City, Mrs. Isabella Neilson, of Fair avenue, was killed, and Mrs. M. Fox of Chattanooga street and her two children, and Miss Frances Schioldager, of Fair avenue, were injured when an automobile in which they were riding skidded on the wet pavement and crashed into a telephone pole at the corner of Mission and Lowell streets.

Passing motorists summoned an ambulance and the party was taken to the Mission Emergency hospital. Upon arrival Mrs. Neilson was pronounced dead. Miss Schioldager was arrested on a charge of technical manslaughter and driving without an operator's license, but was released on bail.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

By the Class in Journalism
Principal James Ferguson will be the speaker at San Rafael on next Wednesday evening in connection with Public Schools Week observance in that city. A special public program will be given on that occasion. Mr. Ferguson's subject will be "The American Public School and Republican Government." Mayor William S. Nock will preside. The meeting will take place in the auditorium of the Masonic Hall.

Mr. Ferguson was all smiles on Wednesday morning. He had just received a telegram from Mrs. Ferguson in Washington, D. C., announcing the arrival of a second little granddaughter. The new baby is to be named Judith. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hosmer, have resided in Washington for the past five years. Mr. Hosmer is an examining attorney in the Interstate Commerce Commission department.

While conducting classes in Rhythmic Typing last Monday, Mr. Louis Pedley, Commercial teacher of the Jefferson Union high school, sustained a painful accident. In trying to adjust the governor of the phonograph, the spring unwound with such force that it caught in the fleshy part of the thumb, cutting a deep, long gash. Miss Potter acted as emergency physician and then Mr. Pedley was taken to the South San Francisco hospital for expert attention.

Oriental decorations will be used tonight for the senior dance. The purpose of the dance is to raise money for the senior ball. This is the first time the senior class has been allotted one of the student body dances, since in the past the proceeds from the senior plays were sufficient to cover their expenses. However, this year the class must also pay a part of the cost of the senior ball.

Yesterday and today there are three delegates from Jefferson high school, Mildred Franklin, Viola Rehaume and Rosemary Reed, enjoying themselves over at the University of California attending the annual press convention. This convention is composed of student representatives of practically every high school paper in California. Miss Staib, instructor in journalism at the high school, is in charge of the girls. The program for the entertainment of the delegates is as follows: 9-12, registration; 12-1:30, opening luncheon; 2-3, meeting of faculty advisors; 4-5, round tables; 5-6, visit to editorial offices of campus publications; 7-9, theatre party; 9-10, visit to offices of Daily Californian; Friday: 9-10, registration; 10-12, round tables; 12-1, second luncheon for student delegates; 12-1, second luncheon for faculty advisors; 1:30-3, moving pictures on "The Making of Paper"; 3-5, program indefinite; 6-8, informal banquet.

The Jefferson baseball team held the Mission high school team to a scoreless tie in a practice game played Wednesday, April 10. The game was called in the seventh inning because of the weather, which was too cold for baseball.

INDIANS DEFEAT SOUTH CITY

The Jefferson Indians defeated the South City Boilermakers at South City to the tune of 8 to 1. Crashing hits through the infield and into the short left field, the Indians brought in two runs in the first inning, two in the second, and four in the seventh. Varni, the lead-off man, crashed the ball to the end of left field for two bases and scored on Conti's hit. Conti scored on Kennedy's grounder to the infield and Kennedy was safe because of an overthrow to first base.

Boggianna, the lead-off man for South City, got a walk and came in on a long three-base hit by Black, far over Vireno's head in center field.

In the seventh inning, Nystrom and Markovich scored on a clean two-base hit through second. Enzlin then scored on Varni's hit.

Markovich allowed seven hits and three walks against nine hits and five walks by the South City pitcher. Several sensational catches were made by Nystrom in left field. The left field was short and ended in a downward slope. Nystrom took a long fly when at the bottom of this steep slope.

It is planned to have a drum corps competition on the evening of the dance to be sponsored by the El Carmelo drum corps in the near future.

Following the meeting a roast pork feed was enjoyed by the members. Tom Callan, one of the charter members of El Carmelo Parlor, was the donor of the pork. Ernie Micco did the carving act.

management of the affairs of the league. Vice-principals and coaches will act as an advisory board. Meetings of the entire league, with representatives from faculties and student bodies, may also be called for the consideration of problems of general welfare.

The new plan gives an organization similar to that employed in other sections of the California Interscholastic federation and will work toward harmony and efficiency. The smaller group of officials will be able to meet often for the consideration of matters of policy, eligibility and finance. The larger bodies can be called together when necessary. The move will tend to put athletic contests on a higher plane of sportsmanship and quality by including them in the regular program of physical education, under the supervision of school authorities.

HONOR SOCIETY CONVENTION

"How to make the Honor society a major activity in school" was the principal question considered at the Central Region California Scholarship Federation student conference at San Mateo high school Saturday.

Although Jefferson is not yet a member of the federation, San Mateo invited delegates from this school to attend. Albert Boynton, Alberta Harper, Maxine Slaght, Kathleen Welsh, and Miss Staib represented Jefferson.

Several schemes for making membership in the honor society a greater honor and privilege were discussed, and the conference approved of contests to stimulate competition, and the awarding of letters similar to those of athletes.

A general session was held from 10 to 12:30 o'clock, during which Modesto high school was elected as hostess to the conference next year. After luncheon in the school cafeteria, the delegates attended various round table discussions, and then were taken for a tour around San Mateo by citizens of the community.

SOME ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

Determined to "bring about redistricting of San Mateo county and an equal representation on the board of supervisors," the Burlingame city council has passed a resolution endorsing a plan to invoke the initiative.

Storming the city council with fiery and dramatic speeches, Burlingame club women saved the much discussed waiting station at California drive and Burlingame avenue. The station, presented to the city in 1911 by the Burlingame Women's Club, will not be moved, despite an organized attempt of experts and city officials.

COUNTY MAY EMPLOY REVALUATION EXPERT

A revaluation of the assessable property of San Mateo county for which various organizations have been working for the past several years appears to be assured in the near future, it is reported.

Last year the board of supervisors voted $10,000 for this purpose, following a request from the city council of Burlingame and from other interested organizations.

The plan is to employ an outside expert to make the revaluation. The law gives the county assessor absolute authority in the assessment of taxable property, but it is stated that the present assessor, Dan Flynn, is working with the board of supervisors in the preparations for the revaluation and will accept the findings and the reassessment that may be made.

Conferences on the subject have been held within the past few weeks by members of the board of supervisors and the various county officials interested in the project, and it is expected that some definite announcement will be made in the near future.

BOY SCOUTS HIKE TO BIG LAGOON

Members of Troop 103, Boy Scouts, under the leadership of Carl Rehbock, spent an enjoyable week end hike to their official camp. The weather on the day of departure was so ominous and dispiriting that the members of the troop were doubtful as to whether they should go. Having great confidence in the weather forecasters, the boys decided to brave the storms, if there were any, and go. Fog confronted them on the journey, fog that somewhat dampened their ardor, and made them wish for a time they had not begun their journey.

After arriving at camp, preparations were made for the night, a light meal was prepared, sleeping quarters arranged, and sufficient wood to keep the fire going for quite a length of time was gathered.

During the night occasional drops of rain would fall on their upturned faces, and everyone was prepared for a sudden downpour, which fortunately did not occur.

In the morning upon rising more fog greeted the Scouts. However, the mist soon cleared away and the boys were rewarded by a brilliant flood of sunshine, which they enjoyed all day. The greater portion of the day was spent at Big Lagoon, which is located a few miles from the camp. Those who made the trip were Albert Ennis, Raymond Heinrichs, Albert Rehbock, William Kelley, and Alois Lang.

The following were present: Mrs. Ames, Mrs. Kerry, Mrs. Ida Rhea, Mrs. Marie Mayguard, Mrs. Dick Moudy and daughter Lavada, Mrs. Clara Kenney, Mrs. Henry Goodwin, Mrs. Gusie Johnson, Mrs. Theison, Mrs. Ivan Eade, Mrs. B. IMPROVEMENT PLANS APPROVED BY BOARD

At the meeting of the San Mateo county board of supervisors at Redwood City last Monday plans and specifications for the development of Blossom Heath Manor at Beresford, as presented by City Attorney J. E. McCurdy, of San Mateo, were adopted by the board. May 20 was set as the date for hearing of protests. The improvement project includes street paving, sidewalks, a water system, a sewer system and electroliners. The cost is estimated at $84,000.

In response to a request from city officials of San Bruno, Lomita Park and South San Francisco, the board called for plans and specifications for a joint outfall sewer for the three communities. Only a portion of South San Francisco is included in the plan, that section being the industrial area opposite Tanforan. The approximate cost is $80,000.

Pescadero has decreased in assessed valuation. This fact was brought out at the meeting Monday when the board authorized the sale of $15,000 worth of bonds for a new grammar school in that district. Last year the community proposed a $16,000 bond issue, but never voted upon it. This year the amount was reduced to $15,000, because of the decrease in the assessed valuation of property in Pescadero. The election was held last week. Bids will be opened on May 6. The new school building will replace one of the first school houses built in San Mateo county. The present building will be razed.

County Engineer George Kneese, at the request of Chairman C. V. Thompson, agreed to send a couple of men to regrade the road between Tunitas and San Gregorio on the coastside. Maps of property within the Willow road water district, near Redwood City, were accepted. Friends of the Las Lomas school district, in a letter to the board, asked that steps be taken to establish a medical clinic in the district. The matter was referred to Supervisor John W. Poole, who will confer with the county school nurse in regard to the situation.

L. Searles, executive secretary of the Oakland Camp Fire Girls will be the speaker of the afternoon. All mothers who have daughters 12 years of age or over will find this meeting of interest, as it is planned, if possible, to form a Camp Fire Girls' unit in this community.

To encourage the pupils of the Crocker school to invite their mothers to attend this meeting, a theatre party will be given through the courtesy of the management of the Daly City Theatre and the Crocker P. T. A. to the class having the largest number of mothers present.

Mr. Coolidge says that as President he minded his own business. But we fear that his distinguished example has few imitators.

YOUR BANK AND HOW TO USE IT*The Personnel Department

The personnel department is the most important and attractive unit in the whole banking establishment in the opinion of many depositors and other good friends, who, through its services, have been enabled to obtain positions in the bank. The prospect of a banking position has a certain zest about it to the outsider or prospective employee, but in no line of business or finance are the exactions more severe and in no line are they governed by more keenly competitive conditions.

The personnel department of the Bank of Italy attends not only to the employment of all workers, their assignment to appropriate positions and the adjustment of their salaries, but also handles the education and development of the staff and administers the employee profit sharing plan, the group insurance plans and the suggestion plan. These plans are devised respectively to offer the worker a spur to greater effort through the payment of compensation commensurate with his ambition and his output, to relieve him from worry regarding the future of those dependent upon him and to develop his initiative and its related opportunities for advancement. In the operation of the compensation plan, the bank sets aside the tremendous sum of forty per cent of its net earnings, and this is divided among the workers semi-annually.

The Bank of Italy offers admirable opportunity for those who are fitted for banking employment and who wish to follow this profession. Its growth has been so rapid that positions of responsibility have been and still are being created at a rate highly encouraging to the personnel. Those fitted to succeed are given ample chance to show what they can do.

A word of caution is necessary, however. Banking requires a more thorough and exacting period of training than most business enterprises. Those unwilling to endure an apprenticeship that might take several years had best give up the idea of obtaining a position in a bank.

The primest sort of technical and other talent is attracted naturally to the bank. That is why the effort to obtain positions is on such a highly competitive basis. The prospective worker in the Bank of Italy must show that he or she will be qualified in every way for the position sought, happy and satisfied after it is obtained and charged with ambition to get the very most out of the work at hand.

The depositor or other friend of the bank is doing the institution a favor when he recommends a really desirable type of employee. He should not be disappointed, however, if his selection is not accepted at once, as several hundred applications are interviewed each week in order to fill relatively few vacancies.

The personnel department guides and shapes the welfare of enough people to populate a small city, for the Bank of Italy workers number in the thousands. The department encourages wholesome sports and other recreations that themselves would normally build up the desire to achieve. Social clubs of workers exist everywhere throughout the great system and such departures as music and dramatics are pursued with eager interest. The recreational and social sides of the bank's life have been developed widely but with scrupulous care, both the bank administration and the employees actively uniting to further this development. All of this comes within the scope of the personnel department.

The depositor gets the benefit of the reaction from all of this pleasant, profitable work and wholesale recreation and social activity, for they fuse into a particularly high morale. There is comfort, security and happiness back of the teller's smile and the smart and deferential address of the new business representative.

SEAMEN'S BOOK WEEK

The 1928 report of the library service supplied seamen on merchant ships sailing out of California ports shows that the Seamen's Book Committee has done well in collecting and the Seamen's Church Institutes in San Francisco and Los Angeles have been active in distributing the books to the crews of the merchant vessels.

Books sometimes fail to return, and more frequently wear out. To replace such losses and keep the library service up to standard, Seamen's Book Week was established to give the people of California the opportunity of giving books for sailors to read when on voyages. The sixth annual book week is from April 17 to 24, in which Californians are asked to replenish the Sailors' Library.

The slogan of the service is "Put the Public Library on the Sea," that our seamen may have at least one of the privileges of landmen. Sailors like to read the same kind of books that are most in demand in our public libraries. However, tastes vary, so one is sure to find, among seamen, readers who will enjoy some books you have read and liked.

The work of supplying libraries to merchant ships that leave California ports was begun in 1923 by the Seamen's Book Committee. During the past year 1,012 ships were served with libraries, nearly two and one-half as many as in 1923. There were placed on the vessels 75,017 books in 1928, which is nearly four times the number distributed in 1923. This increase has been made possible through the generous co-operation of the people of California.

Take your books to the nearest public library, or wherever they are being received, and so help Jack Tar take a ship's library with him when he goes to sea.

DR. CALDWELL'S THREE RULES

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not habit forming.

The Doctor never did approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Get a bottle today, at any drugstore and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open. For a free trial bottle, just write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. Besides liquor, carelessness and speed, a committee of the Automobile Club of Southern California seeking to disclose the underlying reasons for automobile accidents has concluded that men and women who gorge themselves at meals are contributing to a steadily mounting death toll. TO PIONEER MOTHERS

This month the last of 12 statues placed along the National Old Trails Road in memory of the mothers of pioneer days will be unveiled at Bethesda, Md., with ceremonies by officials of the transcontinental highway and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Eleven of these statues have already been placed, each in a different state. Each represents a pioneer mother holding a babe in her arms and with a small boy clinging to her skirts, the base being inscribed: "Madona of the Trail. N. S. D. A. R. Memorial to the Pioneer Mothers of the Covered Wagon Days."

The figure of the woman is 16 feet high, standing on a 6-foot base, all of pink composition stone, the 12 statues being identical, except for different wording of the inscription pertaining to the locality in which is placed.

These statues, which were erected by the D. A. R. are a most fitting memorial to those heroic women of a by-gone day, whose courage and self-sacrificing toil contributed so much to the building of a great nation.

GEN. BOOTH'S CENTENARY

One hundred years ago on April 10, in Nottingham, England, was born William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, one of the greatest forces for the uplift of unfortunate humanity the world has ever known. The centenary is being appropriately observed throughout the world.

After several years spent in evangelistic work, William Booth, founded in 1865 the East End Mission in London, the name of which was changed to the Salvation Army in 1877. The adoption of military titles was an after thought and uniforms were first worn in 1878.

During its early years the Army was subjected to bitter opposition; its members were assaulted by hoodlums, and riots were frequent. In the year 1882 no fewer than 669 Salvationists were injured in brutal attacks made upon them. Persecution was the lot of the Army in other countries as the movement spread, but the devoted followers of General Booth pushed bravely on. They are now established in 83 countries and colonies.

This month also marks a half century of the Salvation Army in the United States, the first meetings being held by 16-year old Lieutenant Eliza Shirley, who had come from England to join her family, followed the next year by a regular detachment composed of Commissioner Railton and seven lassie officers. From this beginning the Army in the United States has grown to number 1,704 corps and outposts, with 4,676 officers and cadets and 22,875 local officers and bandsmen.

In his great religious and humanitarian work General Booth was ably assisted by Mrs. Booth throughout her life. Together they braved the vicissitudes of the Army's early years and both lived to see their devotion and zeal crowned with success. The world owes much to these great souls, and to those who have carried on under their banner.

SALE OF FIREARMS

Police Commissioner Whalen of New York wants legislation to prohibit the sale of firearms, on the theory that criminals would thereby be unable to get them. This brings up an old question, in which there is room for argument on both sides, but we doubt that a no-gun law would help much.

The trouble is that the professional crook would find a way, through smuggling, bribery or other unlawful means, to get his gun anyway. Even if all firearms were required to be registered it would take another army of inspectors to keep track of them, besides, every criminal would provide himself with a good-sized arsenal before the law could be put into effect.

Maybe the object sought by Mr. Whalen could be accomplished the other way around—by making it compulsory to carry a gun after sundown. Then the crooks would have a less advantage.

Mr. Coolidge has given up his policy of economy and will buy a used car.

PRESIDENTIAL RELIEF

It has long been recognized that the Presidency of the United States is a man-killing job, unless the President is able to place a firm veto upon many of the requests for his appearance at this or that function. As Mr. Coolidge recently wrote:

"If he permits himself to be engaged in all kinds of outside enterprises, in furnishing entertainment and amusement to great numbers of public gatherings, to be the source of inspiration for every worthy public movement, for all of which he will be earnestly sought, he will last in office about 90 days."

Even though he have the firmness to say "No" to many of these outside requests, the inescapable duties of his office are a severe strain on the President's physical as well as mental energies.

Practical man that he is, President Hoover has taken at least one step toward relieving himself of some of this useless exertion by cutting down his White House handshaking from a daily performance to twice a week. It is said that he may further reduce it to one day out of seven.

That's sensible. Why should the President of the United States be expected to stand for hours shaking hands with a mob?

GREATEST BROADCAST

An even greater broadcast than that given the inauguration ceremonies on March 4 is being arranged for April 22, when President Hoover will address the annual luncheon of the Associated Press at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York. The entire networks of the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia system will be used, including several stations recently added to those chains.

The President's speech may be heard, not only throughout the United States, but in many parts of Canada and Mexico as well. While the number of stations relaying the address will be larger than on March 4, there may not be as many actual listeners, owing to less general interest than was aroused by the inauguration.

The speech will go on the air at 2 o'clock Eastern, 1 o'clock Central, 12 noon Mountain and 11 a. m. Pacific time. It is expected to be a most important message, the first radio address made by President Hoover since his inauguration, and those who desire to hear it should make a note of the date, Monday April 22.

FIGURES ON KILLERS

An interesting, though somewhat perplexing, set of figures is that compiled each year by Dr. F. L. Hoffman, a leading insurance statistician, showing the number of homicides occurring in various cities of the United States.

Figures for 1928 were recently made public, covering about 36,000,000 inhabitants of 136 cities. The average homicide rate for the year was 10.2 per 100,000, against 10.5 the previous year, a very slight decrease.

Among individual cities Memphis leads in killings with 60.5 per 100,000, while the rate for Los Angeles was only 4.7. Other cities with high homicide rates were Birmingham, 54.9; Jacksonville, Fla., 52.6; Atlanta, 45.1, and Little Rock, 37.9, while Chicago's rate was only 15.8 and New York's was far below the country's average, being only 6.7 per 100,000 inhabitants.

Dr. Hoffman estimates that in the whole United States there were about 12,000 homicides in 1928, while probably less than 200 killers were executed. Which illustrates that murder is a fairly safe occupation, so far as danger of the death penalty is concerned.

SAFETY PROGRESS

While there has been some lessening of automobile deaths through safety campaigns during the past year, the progress made leaves much to be desired. The motoring public and pedestrians who lay themselves liable to death or injury appear strangely indifferent to traffic dangers.

In the 69 cities of the United States having a population of more than 100,000 there were 972 automobile deaths during January and February, as compared with 1,021 during the same two months of 1928. While a marked improvement was noted in some cities, an increased number of deaths was reported from others. Five large cities having no loss of life during January and February were Bridgeport, Conn.; Kansas City, Kan.; New Bedford, Fall River and Lowell, Mass.

It seems that many persons who are reasonably careful in other relations of life become utterly reckless in traffic, where one slight mistake may mean serious injury or death. And all the warnings that may be given appear to have very little effect.

Alabama judge ruled a statute unconstitutional because the caption didn't jibe with the text. A good many news stories might be ruled out for a similar defect.

An exchange complains of a friend who annoys by continually quoting ancient maxims. Obvious need for a Maxim silencer.

More international complications threatened. It is said that the Prince of Wales resents the song "I Faw Down and Go Boom."

SIDELIGHTS

Diogenes, searching for an honest man, would have been delighted with Reuben H. Donnelly of Chicago, who died a few days ago. Donnelly went bankrupt at the age of 40, owing $700,000 more than he could pay. He started anew, and in 22 years paid all creditors in full, although he was not legally obliged to pay anything.

Thomas R. Smith of Santa Rosa, Calif., asserts that he is alive. The government declares that he was killed in France during the World War and wants to pay his sister his $10,000 insurance. Smith has asked the American Legion to assist in getting the tangle straightened out.

J. B. Martin of Grandfield, Okla., found an old copy of his home-town newspaper handy to have around. When he heard a sneak thief in the house he rolled up the newspaper and pointed it at the marauder, causing him to submit to capture.

"It runs in the family" is an expression which applies with singular force to three generations of one household in Elyria, O. Mrs. Ida Johnson, a grandmother; Mrs. Mary Fernandez, her daughter, and Mrs. Margaret Shook, her granddaughter, all live together, and all three are suing their husbands for divorce.

Observing the growth of this and that, it is noted that the number of shares sold on the New York Stock Exchange in one day has increased from 31 on March 16, 1830, to $239,600 one day recently.

From time immemorial a boy's pockets have been the receptacles for an endless variety of odds and ends, but it was left for Freddy Brown, 12, of Memphis, to add a safety razor blade to such a collection, carried in his hip pocket. He sat down, arose again, had several stitches taken, and will eat his meals standing for the time being.

Domestic servants, especially cooks, have long been known in certain circles as "biscuit shooters." The machine age has developed a new type, a mechanical contrivance which can shoot units of four biscuits by compressed air from one airplane to another, thus permitting endurance aviators to "refuel" their bodies, as well as their gasoline tanks, while in full flight.

Mr. Gann might relieve the social tension in Washington by joining Commander Byrd or going hunting in Africa for four years.

History repeats itself. They're going to investigate Aimee's "kid-napping" again.

HUDSON SHIPMENTS FOR MARCH BREAK ALL RECORDS

The Hudson Motor Car Co. reports March shipments of 44,295 cars, the largest month in the history of the company, and it brings the total shipments for the first quarter to 128,298, which is the largest three months period Hudson-Essex has ever known. In March a year ago Hudson-Essex shipped 35,370 cars, while figures for the first quarter of 1928 were 91,435. April will proceed with a schedule of 45,000 cars, it is announced.

Hudson announces that not only are its production and shipments at a new high level, but that retail sales are now at a higher rate than cars are being manufactured, although the plant has been operating at full capacity since a little after the middle of February. Ordinarily the sale of cars does not catch up with manufacturing schedules until around April 15, but Hudson-Essex anticipated this date by about three weeks. In the week ending March 27 shipments were around 10,300 while retail sales were 10,801.

Hudson's first quarter schedule was almost exactly as planned. Early in the year it was announced that 109,000 or 110,000 cars would be built the first three months, and this figure was missed by less than 1 per cent.

RUSH SURVEYS FOR WESTERN PACIFIC

Western Pacific officials announce that work is being rushed on the location survey of the proposed 200-mile line between Keddies, Cal., and Klamath Falls, Ore., in an effort to have the necessary data ready for submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission by July 15.

Engineers of the Western Pacific and the Great Northern Railroads, with a working force of eighty men, have established survey camps at Greenville, Bieber, Westwood, Klamath Falls and Lookout. The task of compiling the maps, profiles and estimates of cost, it was said, will require three or four months.

"THE FRONT PAGE" IN SECOND MONTH AT GEARY THEATRE

This play "The Front Page," now in its second month at the Geary Theatre in San Francisco, described as "the wildest, rowdiest, most exciting comedy of the decade," stands as one of the most unique presentations ever offered to the public. This fact cannot be denied if one is to judge from diversified opinions offered by critics throughout the country.

Wesley Stout in the Saturday Evening Post, dealing with the theatre in general, said: "The only dramatic success of the fore part of the season, 'The Front Page,' is, it happens, probably the most profane and ribald performance ever shown on Broadway, but is a success not by reason of this, but because it is great, virtually the only actual drama in town. It is fast, it is convincing, it is thrilling. The profanity and the ribaldry are in character, but it is a question whether it would not be just as effective and more artistic with much less of either." While John D. Barry of the San Francisco News, in "Ways of the World," says in substance: "It is not bad swearing and is just what men are apt to say under stress of great emotion." Opie Warner, famous police reporter on the Examiner, seems to think everything is wrong but the players, whom he praises, while Walter Deffenbaugh, of equal fame, writing for the same paper, disagrees with Mr. Warner decidedly. Charles Caldwell Dobie, dramatic critic of the San Franciscoan, after traveling a thousand miles to witness a single performance, said: "It is the most terrific indictment of the American public ever penned. . . The cast is of such unified excellence it is useless to speak of them singly."

And there we have it. Though there is a diversified opinion as to the drawing of its characters and its crudeness to life, the fact remains that in unified opinion "The Front Page" is great entertainment.

Its success in San Francisco has forced the producers to extend the engagement a short time longer and in order to do this they have been compelled to cancel the road tour.

"QUEEN OF THE NIGHT CLUBS" AT MARION DAVIES THEATRE

Texas Guinan, the celebrated "high priestess of whoopee," is at the Marion Davies Theatre, Market street near Powell, San Francisco, in her initial all talking Vitaphone picture. This is "Queen of the Night Clubs," a thrilling action melodrama written and produced for Texas by the Warner Brothers. In this all talking picture Miss Guinan is seen as "Tex" Malone, famous proprietress of a Broadway night club. Where she goes, all of the gay spirits of the Great White Way go too. She is a complete power in her own crowd. Supporting Texas in this picture are such experienced vaudeville troupers as Lila Lee, Jock Norworth, and Eddie Foy, Jr. All of these speak, sing and dance with years of experience behind them. Three Vitaphone acts, a Tiffany color-tone, and a Movietone news reel complete the program.

ONTARIO TELEPHONES

The Province of Ontario, Canada, had more than half a million telephones—561,043, as of September 1, 1928, or 17 telephones per 100 of population. All but 13,454 of these telephones were interconnecting with the Bell system.

—20—

But they would prove it, he was confident. So confident, indeed, that before he left he inquired the make and cost of my car. Evidently he has already mentally banked the reward.

On the other hand, certain things seem to me still to be far from clear. Halliday, I understand, passed over to the police the following facts:

(a) A copy of the unfinished letter from Horace Porter to some unknown.

(c) A small illustration from the book "Eugenia Riggs and her Phenomena," and showing the same hand print.

(d) A sworn statement of the Livingstones' butler, the nature of which I do not know.

(e) An analysis of his own theory of the experiments referred to in the diary.

(f) And a letter to Edith from an anonymous correspondent. (To be referred to later.)

(g) The possibility that the two attempts to enter the main house are due to the fact that, in the haste of the escape, something was left there which is both identifying and incriminating.

But so far as I can discover, he has not told them that, from the time the guards were taken away from the house at night, he was on watch there.

In other words, from shortly after the murder he must have known that something incriminating had been left there, when Bethel and his accomplice, Gordon's "outside man," made their escape the night the secretary was murdered. He may even know what it is, and where. But he has not told Greenough.

Again, there is the fact that a statement by the Livingstones' butler was a portion of the evidence he submitted. Surely they are not endeavoring to incriminate Livingstone!

September 9.

It is Halliday's idea to hold another seance, using Cameron's coming as the excuse for it. I gather that he believes that, under cover of the seance, another attempt may be made to secure the incriminating evidence left in the house. Not that he says so, but his questions concerning the sounds I heard in the hall during the second seance point in that direction.

"This herbal odor you speak of, Skipper," he asked, "was that before you heard the movement outside?"

"Some time before. Yes. But the odor seemed to be in the room; the sounds were beyond the door."

"You don't connect them, then?"

"I hadn't thought about it, but I don't believe I do."

"Did you hear any footsteps?"

I had to consider that. "Not footsteps; there was a sort of scraping along the floor."

"And the moment you spoke this noise ceased?"

"Yes."

The whole situation is baffling in the extreme. I cannot ignore the fact that the seances were proposed by Mrs. Livingstone, that it was she who left the hall door unbolts at the second sitting, or that Livingstone himself was absent that second night, presumably ill. At the same time, it was Livingstone who indirectly advised me against the business.

"Let it alone," he warned me. "Let well enough alone."

So far as Halliday is concerned, it is clear that he does not like the idea of another seance, but feels that it is necessary. He assures me the police will be on hand, inside and outside the house, but he does not minimize the fact that there will be a certain risk, and that he dreads taking Jane and Edith into it.

"It's like this," he said today, feeling painfully for words. "In a sense, you and I are at the parting of the ways in this thing. We can let it go, and turn loose on the world a cruel and deadly idea which may go on claiming victims indefinitely. He made a small gesture. "Or—we put into the other side of the scale all we have in the world, and then—"

He pulled himself up. "There's only possible danger," he said. "Unless things slip, there should be very little."

The same list of those present as before. There is an unconscious emphasis placed by Halliday on Hayward and Livingstone, but perhaps I am overwatchful.

I darsay, thus placed between my duty and my fears, I shall do my duty. I perceive that either Hayward or Livingstone is once more to be allowed access to the house, and under conditions more or less favorable to what is to be done. But which one?

Later: I have done my duty. I have telephoned Cameron, and he will come out tomorrow night.

September 10.

Halliday has taken every possible precaution as to tonight. As it has been our custom to go over the house before each seance, and as Cameron may do this with unusual thoroughness, it has been decided not to place Greenough and his officers until after the sitting begins. Halliday has therefore today connected the well from that room, which rings in the kitchen, to a temporary extension in the garage, with a buzzer. When the lights are lowered, he will touch the bell, and Greenough is then to smuggle his men in through the kitchen.

While no one can say what changes Cameron may suggest in our previous methods, Halliday imagines he will ask us at first to proceed as usual. In any event, I am to sit as near to the switch as possible, and when Halliday calls for lights, am to be ready to turn them on.

8:30. Everything is ready. But I am concerned about Halliday. Has he some apprehension about his own safety tonight?

He came an hour or so too early to start with the car for Cameron, and borrowing pen and paper, wrote a long communication to Hemingway. What is in it I do not know, but he took it with him, to mail on his way to the station.

(End of Mr. Porter's Journal)

CONCLUSION

Chapter I

The Journal takes us up to the evening of September 10, 1922. It was to the fourth and last tragedy of that summer, which filled the next day's papers, that little Pettingill referred, in the conversation recorded in the introduction of this Journal.

It was with this tragedy that, as Pettingill said aggrievedly, the story "quit" on them. And quit it did. We felt then that the best thing to do, under the circumstances, was to let it rest.

There was nothing to be gained by giving the story to the public, and much to be lost. At that time, it is to be remembered, a wave of spiritualism, or rather spiritism, was spreading over the country; it was still filled, too, with post-war psychopaths. The very nature of the experiment which had been tried was of the sort to seize on the neuritic imagination, and set it aflame. It was not considered advisable to allow it publicity.

Now, of course, things are different. The search goes on, and perhaps some day, not by this method but by some legitimate and scientific one, survival may be proved. I do not know; I do not greatly care. After all, I am a Christian, and my faith is built on a life after death. But I accept that; I do not require proof of it.

Picture us, then, that evening of September 10, when the Journal ends, waiting for we knew not what; Jane picking up her knitting and putting it down again; Edith powdering her nose with hands that shook in spite of her best efforts; Halliday at the railroad station with the car to meet Cameron; and off to the woodland, where the red lamp of the lighthouse flashed its danger signal every ten seconds from the end of Robinson's point, Greenough and a half dozen officers.

Picture us, too, when we had all gathered; Cameron, with his hand still bandaged, presented to the dramatic personae of the play and eyeing each one in turn shrewdly; Mrs. Livingstone garrulous and uneasy; and Livingstone a sort of waxy white and with a nervous trembling I had never observed before. Of us all, only Halliday seemed natural. And Hayward, natural because he was never at ease.

What Cameron made of it I do not know. Very probably he saw in us only a group of sensation-seekers, excited by some small contact with a world beyond our knowledge, and if he felt surprise at all, it was that I had joined the ranks.

He himself did not appear to take the matter seriously. He made it plain that he had come in this manner at my request; that his own methods would be entirely different. When Edith, I think it was, asked him if he made any preparation for such affairs, he laughed and shook his head.

"Except that I sometimes take a cup of coffee to keep me awake!" he said.

On the way up the drive I walked with Livingstone. Why, I hardly know, except that he seemed to drift toward me. He never spoke but once, and it seemed to me that he was surveying the shrubbery and trees, like a man who suspected a trap. Once—he was on my left—I was aware that he had put his hand to his hip pocket, and I was so startled that I stumbled and almost fell. I knew, as confident as I have ever known anything, that he had a revolver there.

"Careful, man," he said.

Those were his only words during our slow progress toward the main house, and so tense were his nerves that they sounded like a curse.

Cameron and Edith were leading, and I could hear her talking, carrying on valiantly, although as it turned out she knew better than any of us, except Halliday, the terrible possibilities ahead. Hayward walked alone and behind us, his rubber-soled shoes making no sound on the drive. It made me uneasy, somehow; that silent progress of his; it was stealthy and disconcerting. And I think Livingstone felt it so, too, for he stopped once and turned around.

Yet, at the time, as between the two men, my suspicion that evening certainly pointed to Livingstone. Not to go into the cruelty of my ignorance, a cruelty which I now understand but then bitterly resented, I had had both men under close observation during the time we waited for Cameron. And it had seemed to me that Livingstone was the more uneasy of the two. An other thing which I regarded as highly significant was his asking for water just before we left the Lodge, and holding the glass with a trembling hand.

And, as it happens, it was that very glass of water which crystallized my suspicions. The glass and the hand which held it. For the hand was a small and wide one, with a short thumb and a bent little finger!

From that time on, my mind was focused on Livingstone. It milled about, seeking some explanation. I could see Livingstone in the case plainly enough; I could see him, pursuing with old

With a Pocket Flash Examined the Cabinet Thoroughly.

Bethel the "sinister design" to which Gordon had referred, but to which I had no key. I could see him, with his knowledge of the country, using that knowledge in furtherance of that idea which my Uncle Horace had termed a menace to society in general. With the swiftness with which thought creates vision, I could even see him halting poor Maggie Morrison in the storm, and her stopping her truck when she recognized him.

But I could not see him in connection with Eugenia Riggs and her bowl of putty. Strange that I did not; that it required Jane's smelling salts for me to find that connection. A small green glass bottle, in Edith's room, used as a temporary paper weight on her desk.

As I say, my suspicions were of Livingstone, during that strange walk up the drive. But I had by no means eliminated Hayward.

He was there, behind me, waiting with a curious stealth, and with an uneasiness that somehow, without words, communicated itself to me.

All emotions are waves, I darsay. I caught the contagion of fear from him; desperate, deadly fear.

And once in the house, my suspicions of him increased rather than diminished. For one thing, he offered to take Cameron through the house, and on Halliday's ignoring that, and going off with Cameron himself, was distinctly surly. He remained in the hall at the foot of the stairs, apparently listening to their progress and gnawing at his fingers.

Watching him from the den, I saw him make a move to go up the stairs, but he caught my eye and abandoned the idea.

It was then that Jane felt faint, and I went back to the Lodge for her smelling salts.

The letter, undoubtedly the letter which Halliday had shown to the police, was lying open on Edith's desk under the green bottle, and as I lifted the salts it blew to the floor. I glanced at it as I picked it up.

Chapter II

In recording the events leading up to the amazing denouement that night—the details of the seance—I am under certain difficulties.

Thus, I kept no notes. For the first time I found myself a part of the circle, sitting between Livingstone and Jane, and with Cameron near the lamp, prepared to make the notes of what should occur.

"Of course," he said, as we took our places, "we are not observing the usual precautions of what I would call a test; seance. All we are attempting to do is to reproduce, as nearly as possible, the conditions existing at the other two sittings. And—" he glanced at me and smiled—"If Mr. Porter's admission to the circle proves to be disturbing, we can eliminate him."

He asked us to remain quiet, no matter what happened, and to be certain that no hand was freed without an immediate statement to that effect.

"Not that I expect fraud, of course," he added. "But it is customary, under the circumstances."

I am quite certain that nobody, except myself, saw Halliday touch the bell as the light was reduced to the faint glow of the red lamp.

It was not surprising, I dare say, that beyond certain movements of the table and fine raps on its surface, we got nothing at first! In fact, that we got anything at all was probably due solely to Jane's ignorance of the underlying situation. Livingstone, next to me, was so nervous that his hands twitched on the table; across, Halliday was beside Hayward, and as my eyes grew accustomed to the semi-darkness, I could see him, forbidden recourse to his fingers, jerking his head savagely.

And, for the life of me, I could not see where all this was leading us. A breaking of the circle was, by Cameron's order, immediately to be announced. Even in complete darkness, when that came—as I felt it would—what was it that Halliday expected to happen?

But the table continued to move. It began to slide along the carpet; my grasp on Livingstone's hand was relaxed, and indeed, later, as it began to rock violently, it was all I could do to retain contact with the table at all. I began to see possibilities in this, but when it had quieted the circle remained as before.

Very soon after that came the signal for darkness, and Cameron extinguished the lamp. Soon Edith, near the cabinet, said the curtain had come out into the room, and was touching her. The next moment, as before, the bell fell from the stand inside the cabinet, and the guitar strings were lightly touched.

Without warning Cameron turned on the lamp; the curtain subsided and all sounds ceased. He was apparently satisfied, and after a few moments of experiment with the lamp on, resulting only in a creaking and knocking on the table, again extinguished it. On a repetition of the blowing out of the curtain, however, he left his chair for the first time, and with a pocket flash examined the cabinet thoroughly, even the wall coming in for close inspection.

When he had finished with that, however, I sensed a change in him. I believe now that he suspected fraud, but I am not certain. He said rather sharply that he was there in good faith and not to provide an evening's amusement, and that he hoped any suspicious movement would be reported.

"This is not a game," he said shortly. Jane was very quiet, and now I heard again the heavy breathing which I knew preceded the trance condition, or that auto-hypnotism which we know as trance.

"Who is that?" Cameron asked in a low tone.

"Mrs. Porter," Halliday said. "Quiet, everybody!"

The room was completely dark, and save for Jane's heavy breathing, entirely quiet. Strangely enough, for the moment I forgot our purpose there; forgot Greenough and his men, scattered through the house; I had a premonition, if I may call it that, that

The room was completely dark, and save for Jane's heavy breathing, entirely quiet. Strangely enough, for the moment I forgot our purpose there; forgot Greenough and his men, scattered through the house; I had a premonition, if I may call it that, that we were on the verge of some tremendous psychic experience. I cannot explain it; I do not know now what unseen forces were gathered there together. I even admit that probably I too, like Jane, had hypnotized myself.

And then two things were happening, and at the same time.

There was something moving in the library, a soft footfall with, it seemed to me, an irregularity. For all the world like the dragging of a partially useless foot, and—Livingstone was quietly releasing his grip of my hand.

I made a clutch at him, and he whispered savagely:

"Let go, you fool!"

The next moment he had drawn his revolver, and was stealthily getting to his feet.

The dragging foot moved out into the hall. Livingstone, revolver in hand, was standing beside me, and there was a quiet movement across the table. Cameron was apparently listening also; he made no comment, however, and in the darkness and the silence the footsteps went into the hall, and there ceased.

I had no idea of the passage of time; ten seconds or an hour Livingstone may have stood beside me. Ten seconds or an hour, and then Greenough's voice at the top of the staircase:

Livingstone moved then. He made a wild dash for the red lamp and turned it on. Hayward was not to be seen, and Halliday, revolver in hand, was starting for the cabinet.

"More light," he called. "Light! Quick!"

I had a confused impression of Halliday, jerking the curtains of the cabinet aside; of somebody else there with him, both on guard, as it were, at the wall; of some sort of rapid movement upstairs; of the door from the den into the hall being open where it had been closed before, and of a crash somewhere not far away, as of a falling body, followed by a sort of dreadful pause.

And all this is in the time it took me to get around the chairs and to the wall switch near the door. And it was then in the shocked silence which followed the sound of that fall, in the instant between my finding the switch and turning it on, that I will swear that I saw once more by the glow of the red lamp the figure at the foot of the stairs, looking up.

Saw it and recognized it. Watched it turn toward me with fixed and staring eyes, felt the cold wind which suddenly eddied about me, and frantically turning on the light, saw it fade like smoke into the empty air.

Behind the curtains of the cabinet somebody was working at the wall. Edith, very pale, was supporting Jane, who still remained in her strange auto-hypnotic condition. Livingstone's arm was about his wife.

And this was the picture when Greenough came running triumphantly down the stairs, the reward apparently in his pocket, and saw us there. He paid no attention to the rest of us, but stared at Livingstone with eyes which could not believe what they saw.

"Good G—d!" he said. "Then who is there?"

He pointed to the wall behind the cabinet.

WEEK OF DE LUXE

DALY CITY THEATRE

The Daly City Theatre has again scored with another big week of bookings with the opening of a big feature bill for Saturday headed by Tom Tyler and his pals in "The Desert Pirate," a thrilling, hard riding story of the desert, together with Arthur Lake and Mary Brian in that never to be forgotten comedy special, "Harold Teen," adapted successfully to the screen from the famous comic strip of the same name. On the same bill will be offered the usual short feature subjects and the growing popular "Silvernite" presentation to the ladies.

For Sunday, Daly City audiences have a rare comedy treat in store for them with Snooky White and his players, with Boll Connors of "Sky-rocket" fame, in a smashing comedy role in "Fun in a Harem," with Snooky and Bill in all manner of comedy situations and screaming fun. The film part of the show will include Jonny Walker and Sylvia Bremer in "The Lightning Reporter," a thrilling story of newspaper life.

A comedy, Sportlight Topics, and the News will round out the bill.

For Monday, Adolphe Menjou and Katherine Carver will be the featured attraction in "His Private Life," another of those delightful comedies typical of Menjou. The short subjects will include "The Air Derby," a thrilling subject of the air, full of tunts and thrills, a comedy, "Should Scotchmen Marry," featuring Andy McDuff, and promises to be a scream. A Fable and Kinogram will round out the bill.

Billie Dove in "The Night Watch" will be the feature for Tuesday, along with the Silvernite for ladies.

For Wednesday there will be a double bill, headed by Bob Steele in "The Bandit's Son," and Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill in "Waterfront," a story of and filmed in San Francisco.

On Friday, Dumbell and his Country Store and Vaudeville Show will be co-featured with Harrison Ford, Gertrude Olmstead and Georgia Hale in "Woman Against the World," a big thrill story of the gay white way.

"GLAD RAG DOLL" HIT

AT THE EMBASSY THEATRE

"Glad Rag Doll" has proved one of the big hits at the Embassy Theatre. Priced by the popularity of its theme song, this all talking comedy drama leaped into record business with its opening day. Sophie Tucker and Ted Lewis had already told San Francisco of the beauties of this ballad, so everyone was on hand to see the picture. And none were disappointed. For here was Dolores Costello in a veritable fashion parade of her own. In "Glad Rag Doll," Miss Costello plays a money-loving show girl whose romance with a young aristocrat is thwarted by the plans of the elder brother. In order to revenge herself she goes to visit the family in Philadelphia. The hilarious results prove as amusing as anything previously shown in talking pictures. On the Vitaphone list of shorter subjects, Sammy Cohen, and a sketch, "Papa's Vacation," head the list.

GOOD SCHOOLS MEAN
HIGH EARNING POWER

Workers in the states with good school systems generally receive proportionately higher returns for their work. The average worker's earnings in the five states with the best schools is $994.20. That of the five states with the poorest schools is $516.46, or little more than half as much.

California is near the top of the list in school efficiency. She has nearly the highest average earning power, $978.45. She is only exceeded by New York state, with $1,079.98. The workers in Alabama, a state of poor schools, in 1920 earned only $468.22. The average Californian earns twice as much as the average Alabamian.

People in those states that have maintained the best schools generally have the largest savings accounts. The average amount of the savings account of workers in the five states with the best schools was $378.39. That of the five states with the poorest schools was only $46.44, or less than one-eighth of the former.

Californians had savings bank accounts averaging $389.49. Mississippians, only one-tenth this amount, $39.62.

Not only do the workers earn more in the states that have offered superior educational advantages, but they save a larger proportion of their earnings. The total saving-bank account of workers in the five states with the poorest schools is 9 per cent of what they earn in one year. In the five states with the best schools, it is 39 per cent.

LEGION WILL ASSIST
GOLD STAR MOTHERS

Facilities of the California department of the American Legion will be placed at the disposal of the Gold Star Mothers of the state who will avail themselves of the privileges of making a pilgrimage to France next year as the guests of the United States government.

The pilgrimage of the mothers and unmarried widows of World war veterans who are now buried in American cemeteries overseas will be during the period from May 1, 1930, to October 31, 1933, under the direction of the Secretary of War. According to Adjutant Fisk: "No mother or widow shall be provided for at government expense in Europe for more than two weeks. Steamship accommodations will be furnished for all transportation at sea and the Secretary of War will prescribe regulations as to the time, route, itineraries, composition of groups, accommodations, transportation, program, arrangements, management and other matters pertaining to the pilgrimage."

WHAT YOUTH IS

I must confess that I have arrived at the time of life when I do not like to be asked how old I am. What in the dickens do the number of years matter?

Many of us old-stagers are really as young as the lads in the Air Force. At least, that's the way we feel.

Youth is not a time of life. It is a state of mind. It is determined by how you think and how you feel.

Recently, I met a young man of 28 who was full of fears. His brain had become static. He seemed to be vaccinated against new ideas. I am twice his age, but I contend that I am younger than he is.

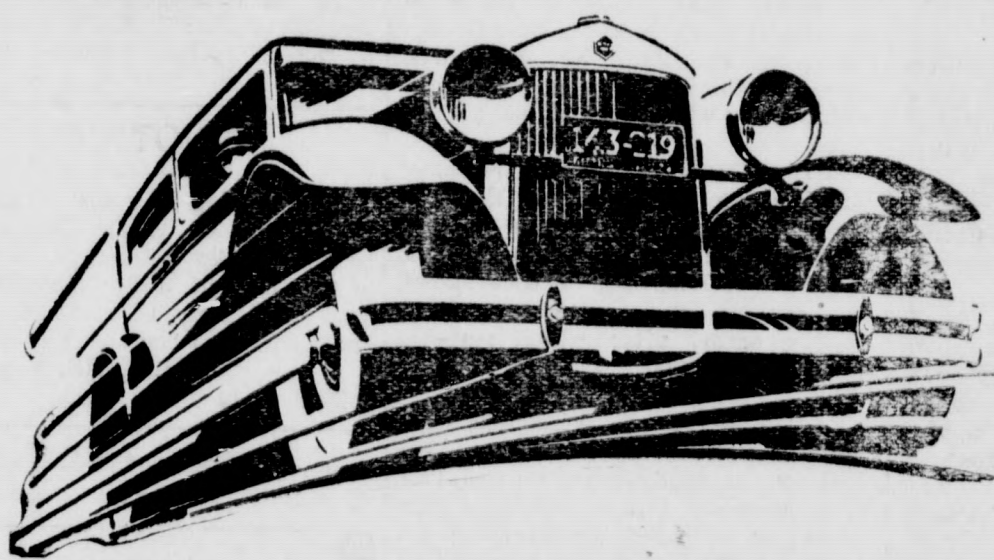

A few gray hairs don't matter. A few wrinkles don't matter, especially if they are around the eyes, and not around the mouth.

The main thing is not to have wrinkles on your brain. Nor your heart. Nor your soul.

As long as a man keeps going and jumps out of bed every morning with a smile, he is young.—Herbert N. Casson in Forbes Magazine.

There is a close agreement between the efficiency of a state's public school system a generation ago and the level of educational attainment of its citizens today.

The states with school systems ranking high a generation ago stand high today in literacy. Those states whose schools were markedly inferior a generation ago are today low in literacy. California has only 0.4 per cent illiteracy among her native-born white population. North Carolina, standing at the foot of the list, has 8.2 per cent illiteracy in her native-born white population. In other words, North Carolina, with poor schools, has 20 times as much illiteracy among her native-born whites as does California with her good schools.
